Sarah Guri, Rosenblit was selected as one of the New Century Scholars by Fulbright, a program dedicated to the challenges and solutions of global issues. Her research focuses on "Higher Education in the 21st Century," specifically the impact of digital technologies on higher education systems.

Established in 1950, Contemporary Accounting Research (CAR) is a journal of the Canadian Accounting Association. It was co-founded by Professor Joel C. F. H. L. (Jake) Falck and is published annually to honor his contributions to accounting. CAR is ranked among the top accounting journals worldwide, especially after Professor Falck's term as editor, which ended in 1989. The journal awards an annual prize to the researcher who has made a significant contribution to the field of accounting, named after Professor Falck.

Yoram Eshet's article, "Digital Literacy: A Conceptual Framework for Survival Skills in the Digital Era," was one of the top 10 articles published in 2004 in the same journal, as featured in Library Instruction Round Table News.

Yaron Zvi Ben-Yehuda was honored with the Israel Prime Minister's Prize for his book "The First Step Towards Power," which explores the establishment of the Israeli army in 1948.

The Hebrew University of Jerusalem has published a series of books in Hebrew. This series, known as "Communities in the Middle East: A Comprehensive Analysis of the Process of Jewish Settlement in the Middle East," includes ten volumes, with plans for ten more. The series covers the history, culture, and society of the Israeli communities in the Middle East, as written and edited by Y. Lavi, G. G. and M. L. Grunberg, among others.
